JENNY HAVLOVICK PH.D., CCC-SLP

Learning Objectives:

- Participants will be able to identify picture book aspects that may help support working on speech and language skills.
- Participants will be able to discuss strategies to use dialogic reading.
- Participants will be able to describe ways to integrate the curriculum into speech and language treatment.

Course Abstract

Many children with speech and language disorders also face challenges with reading and writing. It is within the scope of practice for speech-language pathologists to support students' literacy skills. This session will include information regarding selecting books to integrate into treatment, how to use books to target various speech and language goals, and strategies to use dialogic reading. Information will also be provided regarding integrating curriculum into speech and language treatment.
